a message from the president

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

Sitting in this chair, as President of The Artists' Fellowship Inc., I am alternately relieved and grieved at what we can and cannot do as an organization.

My sense of relief comes from finding the funds to help artists cast out of their homes and studios by hurricane Katrina (as we helped artists cast out of their homes and studios by the tragedy of 9-11). I feel a sense of relief when our board can vote to maintain a monthly stipend for an elderly artist, often an artist who has taught generations of artists, or who once was one of the featured artists of his or her time, but has now fallen on harder times. I feel relieved when we can help an injured or ill artist through a crisis, and send a small but meaningful check to an artist who needs both assistance, and the sense that someone cares.

Sadly, there are times, many times, when we simply can't do what we would like to. Perhaps we can't grant in the amount we would like to, or can't make a grant at all. We help many, but we manage our funds conservatively, and as a result, this year celebrates 147 years of giving back to our community of artists. We are limited by the funds that we generate and uplifted by every single dollar that is donated to help us do what we do so well.

Please consider taking a moment, right now, to send a check to the Artists' Fellowship, Inc. Uplift us with your support, so that we can uplift others.

Come and celebrate with our outstanding volunteer Board of Trustees and me on April 27th at The Salmagundi Club, when we honor artist Morton Kaish, NA, and the Vermont Studio Center and its founders, Jon Gregg and Louise von Weise at our annual dinner.

Cordially,

Babette Bloch, President

MORTON KAISH, N.A.

John Gruen called him "...A latter-day Bonnard, richly gifted in the warm and supple manipulation of paint..." And John Canaday once wrote, "If there is a man alive who enjoys painting more than Mr. Kaish does, he hasn't had a show recently. When he gets into that area of his palette where the reds, oranges and fuchsias are laid out he is most exuberant of all."

In his own words, Morton Kaish writes, "Much of the time we seem to make our way through Life's clutter, training loose ends and bits of unfinished business. Still, for brief shimmering moments we become the sum of ourselves—and the world opens wide."

Born in New Jersey, Kaish received his BFA degree at Syracuse University and continued his studies at the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere, Paris, Instituto d'Arte in Florence, and the Academia delle Bella Arti, Rome. In 1989, Syracuse University awarded him its Distinguished Alumni Award for Achievement in the Fine Arts.

His work is included in a number of public, private, university, and corporate collections. Among them are the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Art, the British Museum, and other major museums.

Elected to The National Academy of Design in 1988, he has since received their Andrew Carnegie Prize, Benjamin Altman Landscape Prize, Gervasi Award for Painting, the William A. Paton Award, and the Obrig Prize for Watercolor. Twice he received the William Ward Ranger Purchase Fund Award. The State University of New York has appointed him Faculty Exchange Scholar, and he is a professor in the School of Art and Design at FIT/SUNY where he has been awarded a New York State Research Grant for work in experimental media.

Louise von Weise and Jon Gregg

THE VERMONT STUDIO CENTER

In 1984, Jonathan Gregg and Louise von Weise founded the Vermont Studio Center as a non-profit year-round "international creative community" for artists and writers who wished to work in a peaceful, open, non-judgmental environment.

Located in the heart of the Green Mountains, considered one of the most beautiful regions in the United States, the Studio Center plays host to sculptors, painters, photographers, printmakers, mixed media artists, poets, and writers. The center accepts many artists for residencies and those who cannot afford the cost may be awarded full or partial fellowships based on merit.

Residencies include private living quarters, private studio space, and three meals a day. Stays can be as short as one month or as long as three months. Those who cannot afford the cost of residency can take part in a work-study program such as working five or 10 hours a week in the kitchen, offices or as part of the maintenance crew.

As the country's largest artists' community, the Studio Center selects approximately 55 artists and writers as residents per month. In addition, it offers the benefit of seven distinguished visiting artists and writers per month, each spending a week presenting their own work and being available to residents for individual studio visits, writing workshops, and lectures. In 2005, the Studio Center was host to residents from 42 countries.

news ABOUT artist members

The McKissick Museum, University of South Carolina, exhibited "An Intimate Look: Works by Sigmund Abeles" from July through December 2005, and the Hampton III Gallery Ltd. showed "Now and Then" from August through October. 2/20 Gallery, New York, honored Rebecca Allen by opening its fall 2005 season with a show of more than thirty of her paintings and works on paper portraying her exploration of rivers, glacial pools and coastal landscapes. Before moving to New York, she lived in the Pacific Northwest for fourteen years. She is currently Curator of Education at the National Academy Museum. The Annual Curators Exhibition at the Salmagundi Club included more than fifty works from the club's permanent collection from February 27 to March 17. Ilene Skeen is chair of the Curators Committee. The Archives of American Art listed Alberta Ciofolelli. Meanwhile, she completed a commission for Diamond Black Capital in Stamford, CT. AF Medal recipient Paul Jenkins' latest exhibit is titled "Water and Color" at the Arkansas Arts Center, Little Rock, Ark., from January 13 to March 16. Deborah Chapin's works are included in The Southeastern Wildlife Exhibition in Charleston. The "Natural World Observed 06" is now in Winter Park. Allen Blagden has joined the board of the Society of Animal Arts. His watercolor, "Pale Male and Lola," adorns note cards produced in 2005 for New York City Audubon. Irving Galleries, Palm Beach, FL, will be exhibiting recent paintings by AF 2006 Medal recipient Morton Kaish, N.A. He will be teaching the biennial workshop, "Power Painting," in the National Academy's fall session. Daniel Hauben's work is currently on exhibit in the "Best of the Bronx" show at Krasdale Foods Corporation Headquarters, White Plains, and in the "Bronx Bound" exhibit at Lehman College. Galerie Peter Baumler, Regensburg, Germany is giving him a solo show in September. Gaye Elise Beda won her first award for sculpture at the Salmagundi Club's summer 2005 show. Massachusetts Governor Mitch Romney appointed Walter J. Zarichak to the Board of Trustees of the Soldiers Home of Holyoke, Department of Human Services. Lois T. Andersen is participating in a show at the Francesca Anderson Fine Arts Gallery, Lexington, MA. Ten of her paintings are on display in an exhibit titled, "In Praise of Local Artists," February through March 25. The American Watercolor Society accepted work by Guy F. Lipscomb for the fourth time. He says that at 89 years of age, he is still struggling to improve. "I miss seeing a lot of the old timers, but life is fleeting, and I have a lot to finish!" The Floridian section of the St.

Petersburg Times recently printed John M. Angelini's true-life short stories in a column called Sunday Journal with his byline. He also exhibited with the Miniature Artists of America at the Smithsonian Institution. The following is from Carey Boone Nelson. "Bad—At the wrong times—Florida during the last three hurricanes. Wilma and its aftermath, was the Worst. Good—Travels with husband, Ken. Revisiting Caribbean again, South America, Greece, and Turkey. Always sketching with hopes to translate sketches into sculpture, as in years of yore. Best—Continuing honors bestowed to daughter and Fellowship member, Kyle Nelson Galante for her paintings and sculptures." Robin Solvang exhibited two oil paintings in a small works show, "Art in Sixes," at the Delaware Arts Center Gallery, Narrowsburg, NY. Ruth Reininghaus won the Art Spirit Foundation Silver Medal award for Excellence in Pastel at the Salmagundi Club's Annual Combined Exhibition. Annette Blaugrund writes that "Surrealism USA," held at the National Academy, won second place for Best Thematic Museum Show in New York City by the International Art Critics Association. Artforum's Robert Rosenblum also selected it as one of his Top Ten Exhibitions of the year. On view until April 30 are two exhibitions, "Treasures from Olana: Landscapes by Frederic Edwin Church" and "For Spacious Skies: Hudson River School Paintings from the Collection of Henry and Sharon Martin." The Daresh Museum invited Sherry Camhy to give a talk on "The New Narrative in Art Today," on April 22. She has recently shown her work at the Katonah Museum of Art, The Parish Museum, Art Students League, and the National Arts Club. The Telfair Museum, Savannah, GA is to exhibit her art this summer. Our World Gallery, North Stamford, CT, presented over thirty new paintings by Richard F. Sabbia. He is also active at the Stamford Art Association as an exhibitor, award winner, and member of the board. The Waltuch Gallery in Tenafly, NJ, gave Ellen Nathan Singer a solo show in January 2005. She also exhibited and demonstrated pastel at the Childwickbury Art Fair, St. Albans, England, in June 2005. Lonnie Mason completed a commissioned montage painting of Tom Shubert, retiring Director of the Student Union Building at Texas Tech University in Lubbock. The institution dedicated the painting in January. It will be permanently displayed in the building's new addition. Mary A. McGlynn judged the 75th Anniversary Washington Square Outdoor Art Show. The American Artist Professional League's Grand National Exhibition awarded her the Helen G. Oehler Memorial Award for "Pounding Surf II." The Salmagundi Club reelected her to the Board of Directors, Chairman of Admissions. Joseph McGlynn received the Antonio Cirino Award for his landscape "White River, VT in the Combined Exhibition at the Salmagundi Club. PHILIP PEARLSTEIN, N.A.

The arresting studio nudes we associate with Philip Pearlstein are the result of an artistic exploration that began in the first half of the twentieth century when abstract expressionism was all the rage and the young artist was painting realistically. In those days, Pearlstein was painting mostly landscapes, often rocks and cliffs in such a way that they utilized the patterns of the abstract expressionists while remaining realistic.

He was drafted into the Army during World War II, during which time he painted and sketched the Italian countryside. In 1949 he was graduated from the Carnegie Institute of Technology and then obtained an art history degree at the NYU Institute of Fine Arts. The same year, his first one-man exhibition was mounted at the Tananger Gallery, and from 1956 to 1973 he was included in ten Whitney Museum exhibitions.

In 1959, upon returning to New York after a sojourn in Italy, Pearlstein turned almost exclusively to realistic, carefully rendered watercolors and oils of studio nudes. Underlying these, however, is the same abstract design structure that that attracted him in his early days.

Pearlstein is a Distinguished Professor Emeritus, Brooklyn College, is President of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in New York City, and is an Academician, National Academy of Design.

ADRIAN BENEPE, COMMISSIONER, NYC DEPARTMENT OF PARKS & RECREATION

Adrian Benepe has worked for the last twenty-five years protecting and enhancing New York City's natural and historic beauty. He continues this effort as Commissioner of the Department of Parks & Recreation, appointed by Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg in 2002. In this role he has emphasized improving park facilities and programs for children, developing new waterfront parks and greenways, and making New York City bloom with millions of new flowers and hundreds of gardens.

As Commissioner of Parks & Recreation, he oversees the operation of more than 28,800 acres and nearly 4,000 properties including almost 1,000 playgrounds, 600 ballfields, 550 tennis courts, 53 swimming pools, 35 recreation centers, 14 miles of beach, four major stadiums, and 2.5 million street and park trees. The facilities are maintained, programmed, and secured by almost 9,000 parks workers, of which 3,000 are full-time and 6,000 seasonal and part-time. He oversees an expense budget of $270 million and a capital construction budget of $552,285,000. Under Commissioner Benepe's direction, the Parks Department works in partnership with over 1000 volunteer groups, comprising almost 70,000 citizen volunteers. Twelve of these groups raise $60 million in private donations to help restore and manage parks and enhance park programs.

Among Benepe's responsibilities is the sculpture collection in New York City's Parks, which constitutes the greatest outdoor public art museum in the United States. A "Who's who" of American art, it includes the work of nineteenth-century masters such as Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Daniel Chester French, and John Quincy Adams Ward, as well as contemporary subjects and conceptions by the likes of Louise Nevelson, George Segal, Alice Aycock, and Robert Graham. Three hundred sculptures and some 1700 monuments grace our most prominent civic spaces as well as the many localities which constitute the greater metropolis. Ranging in size from commemorative tablets to triumphal arches, they honor people and events that helped shape our city, nation, and the international community. It is the cultural and aesthetic legacy that we wish to preserve.
